me his case.

Every rural community has a rough life. He is certainly known the roughest white man in town. This man stores children in his mind, the stray into his life. He has down town late from a take-out from the room for his own a years on his neighbor and in a 14 day in war justice him if

The Amateur Hypnotist Had a Very Close Call.

"Now, I'll give you a hypnotic suggestion," said the amateur hypnotist, who was sitting in a comfortable chair, with a book of hypnotic suggestions open on his lap. "I am sure I can bring you under the hypnotic influence if you will agree to remain just put your mind in a passive condition. Try to think of nothing at all. Fix your eyes on that light now and don't forget to keep your mind a blank. I will count sixty seconds by my watch."

The girl followed directions literally, says the London "Tit-Bits." In twenty seconds her eyes blinked, in forty they closed.

"Ah, I know I would succeed!" exclaimed Edgar, highly elated. "Now, Maud, I command you to tell me the secrets of your heart. Whom do you love? Tell me, I command you."

A momentary expression of astonishment crossed the girl's face, then she spoke in a monotone:

"I love Edgar Popham, and"

"Yes, yes!" cried Edgar, leaning forward with delight. "Go on, tell me all the secrets of your heart."

"I love Edgar Popham," continued the girl in the same tone, "and I would have him more if he were not so stupid. I want to go to the theater twice a week, and he takes me only once in three months. I want diamond rings and he gives me rings with cheap stones in them. When I go out with him and get hungry he never thinks of oysters. When I"

"Enough!" cried the young man. "Awake! I command you."

And he felt without waiting to see the result of his command.

As the front door slammed, the young girl opened her eyes and smiled sweetly and said:

"I hope I did not spring on any of my friends at once. Perhaps I should have let the diamond ring and the oysters go till another time."

How Carnegie Got Library Idea.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie told an audience at Liverpool that he had taken to library founding because his father did it before him.

William Carnegie's efforts at library founding were, as Edinburgh can testify, more than extensive. He was a capitalist as compared with the world of his distinguished son. In 1809 Mr. Carnegie's father was a journeyman weaver in Dunfermline. He and two other divers of the shuttle met and agreed to convert the homes they had in their respective homes to one house. The combined labor was figured out only twenty volumes. The promoters were joined by other weavers, and they agreed to tax themselves to the extent of a few pence per month and from that fund purchase new books. The little institution ultimately blossomed into the Dunfermline Free Public Library—Westminster Gazette.

Largest of Flowers.

The largest of all the flowers of the world is said to be the raffia, a native of Sumatra, so called after Sir Stamford Raffles. This immense plant, says the Scientific American, is composed of five round petals of a brickish color, each measuring a foot in size. These are covered with numerous irregular yellowish white swellings. The petals are surrounded a cup nearly a foot wide, the margin of which bears the stamens. The cup of the raffia is filled with a fleshy disk the upper surface of which is covered with projections like miniature cow horns. The cup when free from its contents, will hold about twelve pints. The flower weighs about fifteen pounds and is very thick the petals being the quarters of an inch.

As a Precaution.

An amusing story is told of the old journalist Theodore Gast from London.

One day he found his office locked and the office boy missing.

When the boy appeared Tomlin reproved him for oversleeping a charge which the boy heartily resented.

"It's this way, sir," he said. "My uncle was living at the Old Bailey this morning and although we weren't on speaking terms with him, I thought, as one of the family, I ought to be there."

"Quite right," said Tomlin. "Never neglect your family duties but when another of your relations is to be hanged please to leave the office key under the mat."—London Chronicle.

Highly Colored.

"Wasn't that element story a highly colored one?"

"I should say it was. The father was purple with rage, the girl red with apprehension, her chin green with envy, the minister white with fear, the fellow showed a distinct yellow streak, while the whole wedding party were blue at the out come."—Baltimore American.

Men of Genius Whose Thoughts Were Wont to Wander Astray.

Abstemious in their work is often carried to such extremes as to make men of genius strangely oblivious to what is going on around them. Many of these men are said to be free of this trait in their abstinent-mindedness. According to Sir David Brewster, when Newton left a room to attend to his usual routine duty, he said:

"The pleasant part of it is not so much abstinent as it is a permanent habit of the mind."

"Well, I guess I'm about ready for luncheon."

And from all the rest came the eager responsive chorus:

"Yes, I!"—Chicago Record Herald.

One of the most charming bits of reporter we ever saw was fortunate enough to listen to was at a big wedding in last. Twenty-sixth street.

The origin of Sterling, as applied to coined money is thus given in "A Short History Touching Sheriff's Accounts," by Sir Matthew Hale, 1683.

"Current coin of the realm is of gold or silver, with an alloy of copper, at least from the time of Henry I, and this alloy gave the denomination of Sterling to those coins."

"Spoken supposition is to take that name from the sterling who came over and reformed our coin, to that alloy—of this opinion was Camden. Possibly in those times a Penny was called a Sterling, with out any other reason than the use of the times, as other mints grow, for the old Act of Henry III tells us that Decarius Anglie Sterlingus (a denarius or penny) is called in English a Sterling, and because this was the root of the measure of silver coin, therefore all our coin of the same alloy was also called Sterling."

His Picture Killed Him.

Among the Greeks the most famous painters were Simon of Amphiaraus and Parrhasios. Of these the greatest was Parrhasios who used to have his head himself to death over the picture of an old woman that he had painted and Apelles who according to some accounts painted cherries so perfectly that the birds pecked at them, thinking them real. Apelles was a contemporary of Alexander the Great and was commended by the conqueror of the world to paint his picture. His greatest work was "Venus Rising from the Sea" painted for the temple of Esculapius at Cos and costing it is said over $100,000. It is claimed that no artist was able to complete his unfinished picture, many of which he left at the time of his death.

Let the Secret Slip.

Queen Victoria once gave an important secret away without the slightest intention of doing so. During the Crimean crisis a lady known to the queen wrote and said that she was desirous of giving an appointment for her boy in the navy, but was afraid that others would not permit him to be given a post just then. The queen called upon the writer of the letter and told her that she need not worry about the appointment of her son, for "the fleet is going to the Baltic, and your boy shall go with it." The queen's delight with the good news repeated it to another lady, who immediately passed it on to a London morning paper.

An Accomplished Dwarf.

Count Potocki, a Polish gentleman at twenty-five years measured thirty-five inches, which was his greatest height. When quite young he displayed an excellent talent in dancing and music. He was possessed of superior intellect and frequented the Russian court. So greatly did he delight the ladies of Paris during a year's residence in that capital that they gave an entertainment in his honor at which the plate, knives, forks and spoons were of dimensions proportioned to his size. He wrote his memoirs in 1788 and died in 1817, at the age of ninety-eight.

How He Figured It.

"Did you bid your dinner and the waiter?"

"Yes, I bid the waiter."

"Why did you bid the waiter?"

"Because you said he was to bid the waiter."

"Did you bid the waiter?"

IS JULIAN A CANDIDATE?

Dothan Ala, Oct 2—Local news papers say that it is highly prob able that Railroad Commissioner
Frank N Julian will enter the race for Congress from this district against Judge William Richardson
the present Congressman. It is said here that Mr Julian is thinning of making the race since Judge
B Almon of Eufaula has announced that he is not a candidate for the nomination.

Mr Julian's home is in Tuscom bia where he has lived for many years. He has never been defeated in any political race that he has en tered. Mr Julian is very popular all over the district and his friends say that he would give Judge Rich ardson a warm race for the nomina tion.
